About

Megan is a Women's Health Nurse Practitioner and part of the Women's Health team at Ridgecrest Regional Hospital. Known for her compassionate, patient-centered approach, she is dedicated to supporting women through all stages of life with thoughtful, personalized care. Her passion for women's health began during nursing school, where she discovered a strong interest in obstetrics that continues to shape her work today.

Megan spent 15 years as a labor and delivery nurse before advancing her education to earn her Master of Science in Nursing and becoming a Women's Health Nurse Practitioner. Her experience allows her to provide knowledgeable, empathetic care while advocating for women throughout their healthcare journeys. Outside of work, Megan enjoys spending time with her family and three active children.
